Essential Information Before You Invest in a Smart Home System

Everything you should know before you invest in a Home Automation Systems

Start here to learn everything about Home Automation by Savant.

At Bravo AV, we've partnered with homeowners throughout the state of New Jersey over the years to revolutionize their homes through integrated technology control and automation. If you want to add convenience to your lifestyle while elevating luxury and even enhancing efficiency, an integrated home control solution can be a perfect fit. But it's also not an easy decision. And you want to ensure that you are receiving not only the best-possible installation but also a genuinely high-performance system that is geared to your lifestyle. Our team at Bravo AV is here to help. As one of New Jersey's leading authorized Savant home automation installers, we want to guide you through the process so it becomes less intimidating – and more realistic for you and your family. Below, we share the basics of what a Savant home system might entail for your property – whether it's in Morristown or beyond.

What Do You Want Your Home Automation System to Feature?

Before beginning any home improvement project, you need to consider your wants and needs for the project. Of course, you have to ask yourself basic questions ranging from what your budget might be to whether you want a whole-home solution or even a single-room setup, such as for a home theater or your great room. But you also need to consider your goals – Do you want a system that prioritizes simplified control of your home's technologies? One that emphasizes energy efficiency? All of these questions are essential to building a system that is optimized for your family. After all, you want to ensure that your family not only will use this new home control system but also will benefit from it. Another consideration is the types of technology you want to feature in your brand-new system. And this is where the fun begins – with a Savant home automation system, the options are endless. For example, you can centralize video sources and manage every TV in your home through one control device. You can schedule for motorized shades to lower during the warmest hours of the day. You can instantly be alerted to potential hazards – such as a spike in interior temperatures or detection of a dangerous gas. Within a Savant home solution, you can revolutionize the way you control every technology at your home – including lights, shades, security systems, thermostats, speakers, TVs, and even your pool and spa. Best of all, investing in a Savant home automation solution doesn't mean you only can use Savant products. In fact, Savant integrates with Lutron lighting control and several other high-performance smart home brands so that you can control them through the universal Savant interface on your in-wall touchscreen panel, smartphone or tablet screen. You can explore the basic navigation of a Savant home system in the video below.

Partnering with a Home Automation Installation Professional

Regardless of whether you have a vision for your home automation system or you have no idea how to get started, the best way to begin your project is to reach out to an installation professional. At Bravo AV, our team is expertly trained to design and install Savant home automation systems. We can provide personalized service, not only working with you to craft a customized design for your home but also to install every component with care and expertise.
